How can a compulsory purchase order be justified for what is in effect a minor tourist attraction equivalent to allowing a funfair, for example, to take over important farmland and cause chaos on an already extremely congested and dangerous road. Local farmers have not been willing to profit from selling land for this hair-brained scheme and it is depressing to think that anyone think it a worthwhile project. So please, think of the communities that will be effected. For once can we put local people at the forefront of decision making rather profiteering. Thank you for your consideration.
