

I am alarmed to hear that there's still a chance that Bristol Airport could be expanded!

I live locally in Backwell and object to this on so many levels. The expansion will:

- put profit before planet. It's ludicrous that the UK government apparently signs up to the Paris agreements on climate change and takes it seriously, yet at a local level we are choosing to put the blinkers on and pretend that increasing air travel is ok!
- I don't want more polluting aeroplanes flying near where I live, emitting green house gases. Let alone it's fundamentally bad for the environment.
- I don't want the predicted 10k extra cars spewing fumes and greenhouse gases around the roads where I live. Again this is fundamentally bad for the environment.

The expansion is morally wrong and there's no argument that will convince me otherwise.

I hope these objections are taken into consideration.

Kind regards

Val
