OFFICIAL

Dear Giulia

Thank you for your email.

The first point to make is that we cannot discuss the specifics of ongoing FOI/EIR requests with anyone other than the applicant themselves.

I do, however, recognise the points you raise and I hope that providing some general guidance will prove useful:

- It is important not to confuse FOI/EIR requests with other legal processes. The information we provide under the FOI Act or the EIR might differ greatly from the information that we provide under, by way of illustrative example, the civil procedure rules or to a Coroner's court. The legal frameworks which govern these different processes determine what information can/cannot be released into the public domain.
- When we consider requests under the EIR it is sometimes the case that the complexity of the information means that it is not practicable for us to make a decision about whether to release or disclose information within 20 working days. This is recognised both at Regulation 7(1) and the ICO's Code of Practice. An extension of the deadline should not be taken as an indication that the public authority has determined that the information in question is exempt from disclosure, merely that it needs more time to consider its position.
- We have forwarded your concerns to the relevant subject matter experts.

Kind regards

Anisha
